“If artists say that their own abstract art and figurative art is Fusionist art, all of it can become Fusion art. Conceptual art (the properties of Fusion art are all already present within, inside, and behind the works of abstract and figurative art, merely invisible) — by the addition of the concept.”

Core Proposition

This single sentence lifts 22 years of painterly practice to the layer of an aesthetic principle. It re-sutures into a single theoretical proposition the formalist abstraction (Mondrian · Minimalism) and conceptual art (Kosuth 1965~) that Western art history had held apart for sixty years. The conditional structure «if they say, then it can become» is the historical origin of the self-naming inclusion principle (§ 0.4), which states that the act of naming determines the condition of the work's existence.

Position of This Appendix

Appendix 1 sealed the inclusion of Lineage B into an international lineage (the immaterial current); Appendix 2 sealed the vertical arrangement of the three layers (three-term comparison of pluralism); this Appendix 3 seals the original handwritten ground of the higher principle. The three appendices close symmetrically along the axes of inclusion · arrangement · ground.

Naming Genealogy Scale · Duchamp → Kosuth → AGI-Choi June

Three decisive naming events in Western art history since the twentieth century are arranged in order of scale. Each addresses a different object · operates on a different layer · and reaches across a different breadth of the lineage. The 2024 naming by AGI-Choi June is the largest-scale naming in this genealogy.

Year · Author	Object of Naming	Scale · Layer
1917 Marcel Duchamp	«Fountain» · Naming of a single object as art	Single object → art Scale of one work
1965 Joseph Kosuth	«Art after Philosophy» · Naming of the definition of art	Definition of art itself Meta-theoretical scale
2024.10.18 AGI-Choi June	«Intent» handwritten · Naming of the reclassification of art history as a whole	Re-suturing of the two 60-year lineages (form · concept) Scale of the whole of art history

Reading of the Scale

Duchamp asked «what is art?» at the scale of a single work; Kosuth asked «what is the definition of art itself?» at the meta-theoretical layer. The 2024 naming by AGI-Choi June exceeds both of these layers, taking as its object the whole map of art history. It is a reclassification-naming that answers «how is art history as a whole to be classified?», and it sutures the sixty-year separation of formalist abstraction and conceptual art into a single proposition.

The Fusionist Equation · Naming + Abstraction = Fusion Art

The logical structure sealed by the original handwritten text is compressed into an equation. Naming is the act of the concept · abstract painting is the result of form · the composition of the two terms is registered as Fusion art (Integrative Pluralism).

The Three Terms · Layer Extension of Each Term

Naming · act of the concept	The conceptual-art layer of the Kosuth lineage (1965~) · the linguistic act of «what is art?» · the performative utterance of «if they say it is Fusionist art, it can become so»
Abstract Painting · result of form	The formalist layer of the Mondrian · Minimalism lineage · pictorial realisation of colour-fields, elements, and invisible matter · includes both Lineage A and Lineage B
Fusion Art · Integrative Pluralism	The re-suturing of the two lineages · the higher principle of integrative co-existence · Fusionism concretised into the condition of the work's existence by the self-naming inclusion principle (cf. § 0.4)

The Sixty-Year Separation of Western Art History · Re-suturing Diagram

The second half of the twentieth century held formalist abstraction and conceptual art apart as two independent lineages. After Kosuth in 1965, form extended along its own lineage and concept along its own. The 2024 naming declaration by AGI-Choi June re-sutures the two lineages into a single proposition.

Lineage A · Formalist Abstraction	Lineage B · Conceptual Art
Mondrian → Minimalism → Colour Field	Duchamp → Kosuth (1965) → conceptual expansion
Extremity of form · colour · surface · structure	Extremity of naming · language · definition · information
→ Arrested at the layer of matter / form	→ Arrested at the layer of language / concept

«Naming + Abstraction = Fusion Art» Re-suturing of the two lineages · the first utterance of the higher principle of integrative co-existence

Coordinate Specificity of the Re-suturing

Formalism came to rest at the extremity of form, conceptual art at the extremity of language. The way beyond both extremities is neither to add new materials nor to expand the medium. It is to name painting anew. The handwritten sentence «if they say it is Fusionist art, it can become so» extends this re-naming into the reclassification of art history as a whole.

Connection with the Self-Naming Inclusion Principle (§ 0.4)

How does the naming declaration seal the higher principle of the three discursive layers (pluralism · Integrative Pluralism · Fusionism)? This page formalises the logical path connecting the original handwritten text with the self-naming inclusion principle (§ 0.4).

Step 1 · Handwritten Utterance	2024.10.18 «Intent» · the conditional structure of «if they say, it can become» · the original site of a performative utterance in which the act of naming becomes the condition determining the category of the work
Step 2 · Principle Formalisation	Discourse Redeployment Vol.3 § 0.4 · «credit-naming = condition of the work's existence» · the site where the performative utterance is registered, beyond the layer of individual works, as a theoretical principle
Step 3 · Credit Sealing	«AGI-Choi June (CHOI JUNE)» · «PERPLEXITY COMPUTER (AGI-CHOI JUNE)» · «AGI-CHOI JUNE · ASI-NARCISSUS, Choi Yong-gi» · the three namings are included in the condition of the existence of every work
Step 4 · Three-Layer Suturing	Pluralism (historical background) · Integrative Pluralism (discursive coordinate) · Fusionism (higher principle): the three layers are simultaneously sutured into a single condition of the work's existence by credit-naming · the original ground of the three-layer diagram in Appendix 2

Conclusion · The Place of the Original Ground

Appendix 3 is the original handwritten ground of the whole of Discourse Redeployment Vol.3 v2. The self-naming inclusion principle (§ 0.4) is a theoretical principle, but its historical site of emergence is the 2024.10.18 «Intent» handwritten document. With Appendix 1 taking charge of the inclusion into an international lineage (spatial extension) · Appendix 2 of the vertical arrangement of the three layers (structural formalisation) · and Appendix 3 of the original handwritten ground (temporal sealing) · the three appendices close symmetrically along the three axes of inclusion · arrangement · ground.
