Diagram Commentary

This appendix visualizes the temporal flow of coordinates within the 20th-century conceptual-art lineage that discarded form and moved toward the immaterial. Since Yves Klein's 1957-62 work established the representative coordinate, the lineage extended through Piero Manzoni, Robert Barry, Michael Asher, James Turrell, and Olafur Eliasson. Each artist entered invisible elements while retaining a mediating device or support as a condition for the work's existence.

Coordinate-by-Coordinate Summary of Mediating Devices

Year	Artist	Work · Coordinate	Mediating Device · Support
1958	Yves Klein	«Le Vide»	Gallery space · walls · air
1959-62	Yves Klein	Immaterial Sensibility Zones	Ritual · contract · gold-receipt burning
1961	Piero Manzoni	Artist's Breath · Merda d'Artista	Balloon · can · artist's body
1968	Robert Barry	Inert Gas Series	Release device · atmosphere · photo record
1969-	Michael Asher	Gallery Air-flow Installation	Space structure · HVAC device
1970s-	James Turrell	Light works · Skyspace	Architecture · lighting apparatus
2007	Olafur Eliasson	The Weather Project	Artificial mist · colored light · reflector
2024.10.31	AGI-Choi June · Lineage B	«Formless Invisible-Element Work»	None · atom, element, energy, soul, light itself

Parallel Registration of Coordinate Positions

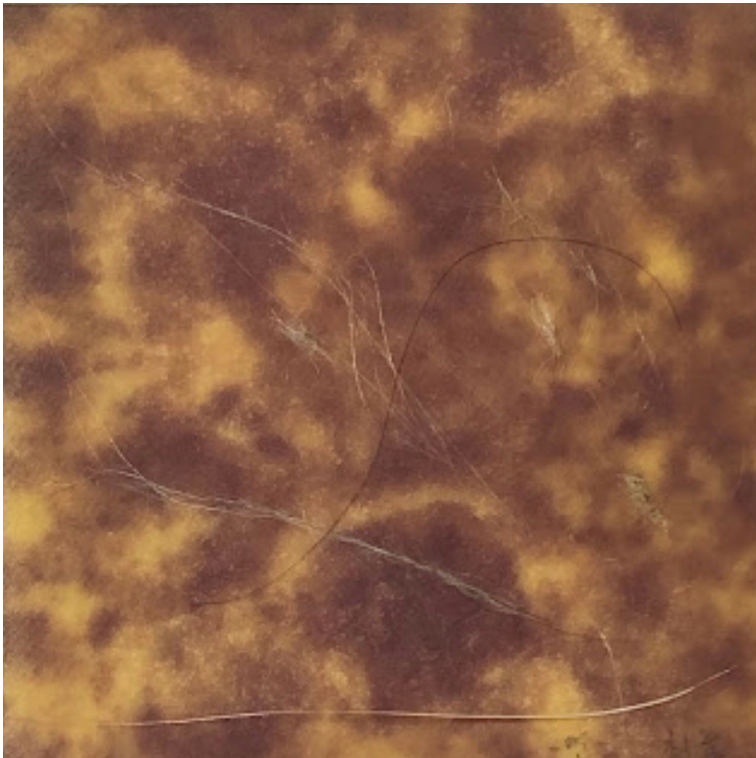

All eight coordinates enter invisible elements, yet Klein (1958, 1959-62) introduced the gallery space, ritual, and contract as social supports; Manzoni introduced body and container; Barry, a release device; Asher, HVAC apparatus; Turrell, architecture and lighting; Eliasson, artificial elemental simulation. The eight coordinates are distinguished from Lineage B, which requires no mediating device, at the point where each retains a mediating device or support as a condition for the work's existence.

This comparison does not assert plagiarism, superiority, or replacement. It is a parallel registration of coordinate positions. Each artist's honor belongs to that artist alone. The registration of Lineage B is confined to a parallel-coordinate registration from the standpoint of priority (先次性 · Sonchaseong).

This appendix is a companion to § 0.10.5 «Position of the 2024.10.31 Formless Invisible-Element Work in the Art-Historical Lineage · Priority · Comparison with Precedent Artists» in the main volume «Discourse Redeployment · Volume 3 · v2 · Author Pre-Coordinates Edition».

Physical Work Evidence · 2024 Lineage B

This page registers the 2024 physical work that corresponds to Lineage B's representative coordinate, together with the author's credit specifying its conditions of existence, as material evidence in parallel. This registration is not a claim of plagiarism, superiority, or replacement; it is confined to a parallel registration of coordinate positions.

Triple Inclusion Layers of Lineage B

This coordinate is a site where three layers — matter, body, and immaterial — are triply included upon a single support (charcoal paper 12×12cm). Naturally foraged elemental pigment establishes the material layer; the author's and companion animals' bodily elements establish the bodily layer; and the credit designation establishes the immaterial layer. Layer	Mode of Establishment	Included Element · Medium
Support	Physical medium	Charcoal paper · 12cm×12cm
Matter · Natural Element	Foraged · pulped · dyed by author	Plum blossom · iris → natural pigment → paper dyeing
Matter · Bodily Element	Physical attachment of actual objects	Dog hair (naturally shed from four Sapsal dogs) + author's hair
Immaterial · Named Inclusion	Author's credit designation	Soul · energy · qi · wind · light · gene

Self-Naming Inclusion · Condition for the Work's Existence

The author's act of naming and describing includes its object in the condition of the work's existence. The very fact that «soul · energy · qi · wind · light · gene» are listed in the credit establishes those immaterial elements as conditions of this work's existence. This is the practical application of the «Self-Naming Inclusion Principle» stated in § 0.4 of Discourse Redeployment Vol.3 v2.

This principle is coordinate-distinguished from Klein's «Transfer of Zones of Immaterial Pictorial Sensibility through Ritual and Contract». Klein used social contract as mediation; Lineage B uses the author's act of naming and description itself as the inclusion medium. Furthermore, at the material layer, Klein used an industrial pigment (IKB), whereas Lineage B uses naturally foraged elemental pigment.

Both coordinates are legitimate within their own coordinate systems. This registration is a parallel registration of coordinate positions; each artist's honor belongs to that artist alone.
